Climate Dress

Nov.2.2010

Reporter : Jun-Hyang Bae Country : Denmark

The Nordic Fashion Week

The Nordic Fashion Week was planned to introduce Nordic design brands and designers to China, so it was held from August 3-6, 2010, to coincide with the Shanghai Expo.

In the fashion event held together with the Nordic Lighthouse Event, the 2009 "wearable technology concept" winner was showcased. It is a dress by Michel Guglielmi, a professor for the Danish Design School.

The "Climate Dress"

As the Climate Change Summit Meeting was held in Copenhagen, Denmark, in December, 2009, the Danish have quite a high interest in climate change.

Of course, climate change issues are briskly discussed by Danish designers and at design schools, and there's active research into designers' obligations and responsibilities for climate change as well as the roles of design in climate change.

Amid this atmosphere, the "Climate Dress" was created. It is a result of cooperation among the students and professors of the Danish Design School, Diffus-Design (design company), Alexandra Institute (research center), and Forster-Rohner (Swiss embroidery company).
